

The New Wellness Approach to Dentistry: How to get better results for your patients and your practice.

Course Description

The future of dentistry is squarely focused on the role that a preferred level of oral health plays in overall health. That means dentistry can no longer just be about helping patients clean and save their teeth. Clearly, it is time for savvy dental care providers to resign from the oral hygiene police and join the wellness force. This course will show you how to do just that! Attendees will leave with the knowledge and materials necessary to immediately improve their ability to motivate, diagnose and treat patients. Learn what to say, what to do and what to use to get better results for your patients and better performance from your practice. Finally, a comprehensive approach that makes sense and consistently works.

Attendees will learn:

- What we can say for sure about the role oral inflammation plays in overall health (and whom we should be saying it to)
- The new message of dentistry – How to deliver it throughout your office
- A new wellness examination protocol – how to effortlessly incorporate screening for the wellness factors that affect oral and systemic health (and can increase case acceptance).
- The knowledge necessary to partner with medicine to co-manage the patients we have in common.
- The new goal of perio therapy – it's about more than pockets.
- A new approach to perio debridement – A sensible approach to what to use when and when to use it.
- Realistic inflammation-reductions strategies for your patients (and maybe even yourself).
- A logical approach to patient hygiene – we have been doing it all wrong.
- Everything you need to start doing things differently tomorrow!

This is a fast-paced learn-it-today-use-it-tomorrow seminar which is supplemented with practice management materials which makes managing patient's oral and overall information easy and efficient. This course is designed for the entire dental team. Doctors and hygienists and the entire office team are strongly encouraged to attend together.
